English Department Open House

- The English Department’s first annual Open House held in our very own Anderson House on March 1st was a great success! Both our current majors, minors and Master’s students, as well as students interested in becoming English majors and minors were able to learn more about our wonderful Department. Our faculty members were there to discuss their exciting interdisciplinary approaches to courses and research. We also unveiled our new Creative Writing Minor with two of the professional writers, Joan Houlihan and Morris Collins, who teach courses in poetry and novel writing, respectively.
