

The Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies at Clark University invites applications for the position of Visiting Assistant Professor in Holocaust History for the academic year 2017-18. We seek a junior scholar who will be engaged in the research life of the Center, with responsibilities to teach two courses per semester, and offer one additional unit each semester of research-oriented instruction through independent studies at the graduate level. These activities will contribute to Clark's undergraduate concentration in HGS and the History Department's PhD program in Holocaust History and Genocide Studies. The visiting professor will be a full participant in the Strassler Center scholarly community, attending lectures and events, mentoring students, and presenting their research. The successful candidate will possess a doctorate in History, strong teaching credentials, and research publications. Applicants whose research demonstrates strong expertise on the Jewish perspective and experience of the Holocaust will be most competitive.

Please submit a CV, detailed statement of professional experience, research and teaching interests, and contact information for three references to Jean Hearn at jhearns@clarku.edu. The initial review date is March 6, 2017 and will continue until the position is filled.

Founded in 1887, Clark is a teaching and research university located in Worcester, Massachusetts, and one of the oldest graduate institutions in the United States. The University's mission is to educate undergraduate and graduate students to be imaginative and contributing citizens of the world, and to advance the frontiers of knowledge and understanding through rigorous scholarship and creative effort.

Clark University is an affirmative action/equal employment opportunity employer and strongly encourages members from historically underrepresented communities - inclusive of all women - to apply.
