INTRODUCTORY PHYSICS INSTRUCTOR POSITION
AT CLARK UNIVERSITY (PART-TIME)

The Physics Department at Clark University (Worcester, Massachusetts) has a one-semester, part-time, non-tenure track position available for a Physics Instructor starting August 2013. The instructor will be expected to teach the undergraduate Calculus Introductory Physics course to approximately 30 students in the Fall 2013 semester.

The ideal candidate will have a doctoral degree in Physics or a closely related field and a strong interest in teaching. Consideration will be also given to candidates with a master’s degree who have experience teaching a similar course.
Previous teaching experience is desirable.

Clark University is located in central Massachusetts near many other excellent educational and research institutions. Interested Candidates should submit a letter of application, a current CV, and three letters of recommendation to Arshad Kudrolli, Department Chair, at physics@clarku.edu. It is also possible to submit by mail using the address below, but electronic submission is preferred.
