Clark University
Political Science Department

Handbook for Students
2012 – 2013

Department Office
Jefferson Academic Center 302
Phone: (508) 793-7155
Table of Contents

Undergraduate Academic Program ............................................. 1
Requirements for the Major .................................................. 2
Subfield Specialization Requirements ................................. 3
General Requirements ...........................................................) 3
General Courses ................................................................. 5
Subfield Specialization Options:
   I. American Politics & Public Policy ................................. 5
   II. Comparative Politics ............................................... 7
   III. International Relations ........................................... 9
Grading for the Major ............................................................ 11
Steps for Declaring the Major ............................................ 11
Doing a Concentration Along with the Major ........................... 12
Internships, Semester in Washington, and Study Abroad ....... 12
Honors in Political Science ................................................ 13
Other Honors, Awards, and Prizes ..................................... 16
Political Science Graduate School Advice ............................ 18
Department Faculty ............................................................. 19
Major Worksheet ............................................................... 24
University Requirements for Graduation Checklist ............... 25
Requirements for the Minor ............................................... 26
Minor Worksheet ............................................................... 26
Space for Notes ................................................................. 27
UNDERGRADUATE ACADEMIC PROGRAM

Why Choose Political Science as a Major?

More than 75 years ago, Dr. Harold Lasswell, a prominent Political Science professor, wrote a fascinating book entitled Politics: Who Gets What, When, How? His book inspired other political scientists to ask another profoundly important question, namely: Why? Over the years, these questions have remained critically important. If you’re interested in exploring them in depth, then Political Science is the major for you.

Studying politics involves examining the making of both conflict and consensus; learning what the stakes are; explaining why some groups gain access to the debate while others are left out; and how society as a whole is affected by political actions and inactions. Studying politics enables you to understand how consensus is reached on difficult questions; what can upset that consensus; and how new public debates get generated. Investigating politics involves addressing vexing questions that confront people in countries all over the world these days. For example:

- Why are some governments stable and others unstable?
- How do formal government institutions and informal political resources affect the ability of leaders to govern effectively?
- What factors cause wars or contribute to a peaceful resolution of conflicts?
- How do public policies affect citizens’ lives and how can citizens affect those policies?
- In what ways do differences in the socio-economic characteristics of people, such as their race, religion, gender, ethnic background, income or education level, affect their political attitudes and behavior?
- What political factors facilitate or impede the realization of social justice and equality?
- And most important, who gets to decide who will decide these and other matters when conflicts over them arise?
The goal of the Political Science major is to equip you with analytical concepts, theories, relevant information, and tools for investigation that will enable you to develop your own answers to these questions and to other important questions that are likely to arise in the future.

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE MAJOR

(Also see the worksheet at the end this Handbook.)

The requirements for the major are designed to give you a broad introduction to the study of politics as well as the opportunity to gain depth in a subfield of particular interest to you. You get to choose one of three subfields as your specialization within the Political Science major:

- American Politics and Public Policy
- Comparative Politics
- International Relations

Students must take a minimum of thirteen (13) courses for the major. Although the number of required courses is fixed, there is considerable leeway to choose the specific courses you take. Eleven (11) of the courses are in the Political Science Department; two (2) courses are from other disciplines. The non-Political Science courses are intended to complement the study of politics with other perspectives and to acquaint you with significant relationships that exist between politics and other societal sectors, such as the economy.

The thirteen courses required for the Political Science major are divided into two categories:

1. Subfield Specialization Requirements
2. General Requirements
SUBFIELD SPECIALIZATION REQUIREMENTS

You will take five courses in your chosen subfield and one History course related to it.

1. The subfield introductory course: PSCI 050 Intro to American Government, or PSCI 070 Intro to Comparative Politics, or PSCI 069 Intro to International Relations.
   Students are strongly encouraged to take this course in their first or second year.

2 - 3 - 4. Three additional Political Science courses in your chosen subfield. One of these must be at the 200 level.

5. One junior/senior Capstone Seminar in your chosen subfield.
   Note: The Subfield Introductory Course (or Permission of Instructor) is a prerequisite for the subfield Capstone Seminar.

6. One History course that is related to your subfield.
   Note: You should select the related History course to take in consultation with your Political Science faculty advisor.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

You will take seven courses to fulfill the general requirements for our major:

7. One introductory course outside the subfield you choose for your specialization: PSCI 050 - Introduction to American Government; or PSCI 070 - Introduction to Comparative Politics; or PSCI 069 - Introduction to International Relations.
   Students are strongly encouraged to take this course in their first or second year.

8. One course on political science research methods and skills: PSCI 107 - Research Methods in Politics. (PSCI 107 also fulfills the University’s “FA” requirement.) Students are strongly encouraged to take this course in their second year. It will help you acquire research skills you can use in your other Political Science courses.
9. One course in normative political theory.
e.g., PSCI 155, PSCI 203, PSCI 206, or PSCI 260 or PSCI 265.

10. Economics 010 - Economics and the World Economy
_Students are strongly encouraged to take this course in their first or second year._

11 – 12 – 13. Three Political Science courses _outside_ your subfield specialization.
_One of these three must be a 200 level course. One must be in the 3\textsuperscript{rd} subfield—either the Introduction to that subfield or any other course in it._ For example, if your subfield specialization is International Relations and you’ve also taken the Introduction to Comparative Politics course, you will need to take either the Introduction to American Government course or some other course in the American Politics and Public Policy subfield. One of these three courses _may be_ an additional normative political theory course beyond the one that is required for all Political Science majors.

In summary, a total of thirteen courses must be taken to fulfill the requirements for the Political Science major:

- eleven in Political Science
- one in Economics
- one in History

_A minimum of three of the Political Science courses you take (including the Capstone Seminar) must be at the 200 level._

Note: It may be possible to fulfill a requirement for your Political Science major with a for-credit internship, an independent reading or research project (supervised by a faculty member), or a course (or courses) you take as part of a study abroad program. If you plan to do an internship or participate in a Study Abroad program, you should make sure to discuss your plans with your Political Science faculty advisor _before_ you apply in order to find out which, if any, requirement(s) it may fulfill for your major.
General Courses:

107    Research Methods
155    Roots of Political Thought
203    Political Theorists and Their Theories
206    Recent Political Theory
260    Democratic Theory
265    Black Political Thought

Subfield Specializations

I. American Politics and Public Policy

The American Politics and Public Policy subfield is wide-ranging. It includes the study of basic political and governmental institutions, such as the presidency and political parties; major political processes, such as the legislative process and decision making by the courts; and important patterns of political behavior, such as citizen participation, interest group lobbying, campaigning and voting.

If you choose American Politics and Public Policy as your subfield, you will become familiar with each of these broad areas. You will also learn about the interrelationships among them in order to understand not just how the American political system operates, but why it emphasizes particular values and allocates certain resources to different groups and individuals. The central questions you will address as you explore the various facets of American politics are: Who benefits and who is disadvantaged?

The federal structure of American government and the diversity of the population also make it essential for you recognize significant variations in government institutions, political processes, and political behavior within the United States. Such variations are considered in courses on, for example, urban and suburban politics; lawyers, judges, and politics; African American politics; and women and politics.
The policies that result from (or are stymied by) the complex interplay of forces in the American political system are also of increasing concern to many students of American politics as well as to many members of the American public. Hence, courses that focus on specific policy areas, such as housing, the environment, and the economy, are also exciting areas to explore in the American Politics subfield.

The Political Science Department offers the following courses in American Politics and Public Policy: (See the Clark Catalogue for full descriptions.)

050  Introduction to American Government
091  First-year Seminar: Gender Gap and American Politics
099  First-year Seminar: Public Opinion and American Democracy
105  Introduction to Ethnic Studies from an American Perspective
154  Introduction to Public Policy in the United States
157  The Politics of U.S. Environmental Issues
158  African American Politics
159  Political Participation in the U.S.
170  American Political Thought and Behavior
171  Urban Politics: People, Power and Conflict in U.S. Cities
172  Suburbia: People and Politics
175  Women and U.S. Politics
204  The American Presidency
205  U.S. Campaigns & Elections
213  Policy Analysis
220  Legislative Redistricting: The Geography of Politics
223  Urban and Suburban Housing Policies
235  Money and U.S. Politics
251  U.S. Social Movements and Interest Groups
252  U.S. Political Parties
253  U.S. Judicial Politics
255  The Politics of U.S. Congress
258  U.S. Social Policy
264  Race and Representation
271  American Jury System
272  U.S. Constitutional Law: Civil Liberties and Rights
273  U.S. Constitutional Law: Governmental Powers
II. COMPARATIVE POLITICS

Comparative Politics has two intertwined meanings at Clark: 1) in-depth study of politics in two or more countries outside the United States; for example, Canada, Mexico, the former Soviet Union, Vietnam, Great Britain, France, Jordan, Israel, Brazil or South Africa, and 2) systematic comparisons of important aspects of politics, such as social movements or policy-making processes, in two or more countries. Comparative Politics subfield specialists are given the opportunity to delve into politics as experienced by elites and by ordinary people in other countries.

The Political Science Department offers two kinds of Comparative Politics courses: 1) courses that focus on the politics of particular countries or groups of countries, for example: Politics of Africa, Middle East Politics, Russian Politics, Latin American Politics, Politics of Western Europe, Politics of Japan, and 2) courses that focus on particular puzzles, which are best explored on a trans-national basis, for example: Revolution and Political Violence, Mass Murder and Genocide under Communism, Women and Militarization, Comparative Gender Politics, Transitions to Democracy, Comparative Environmental Politics, and Globalization and Democracy.

Both of these types of courses are Comparative Politics courses. While the U.S. is deliberately kept off center stage in these courses, most of them raise specific questions about American politics - its policies, experiences, assumptions - as they are seen from the vantage point of people in other countries.

We see Comparative Politics as an approach that opens up new questions and suggests fresh answers to old questions. It alerts us to the varieties—and also the often surprising similarities—in how public power is gained, justified, and wielded in different countries.
Puzzles you may find yourself tackling as a Comparative Politics specialist include: Why and how do revolutions happen? How can a dictatorship become a democracy, and vice versa? Why are some countries more successful than others in developing and implementing effective environmental policy? How do societal understandings of sex, masculinity, femininity, and power shape our lives? What is the relationship between a country’s social and economic conditions and its political system?

The Political Science Department offers the following courses in Comparative Politics:  (See the Clark Catalog for full descriptions.)

070    Introduction to Comparative Politics
094    First-year Seminar: Dictators and Revolutionaries in Latin America
102    First-year Seminar: Political Science Fiction
103    Africa and the World
104    The Politics of Ethnicity and Identity
WS 110    Introduction to Women’s Studies
117    Revolutions and Political Violence
ID 125    Tales from the Farside
136    Sub-Saharan Africa: Issues and Problems
173    Introduction to Latin American Politics
174    Middle East Politics
177    Transitions to Democracy
178    South Africa: History and Contemporary Politics
208    Comparative Politics of Women
212    Politics, Culture and Society in Latin America
214    Mass Murder and Genocide under Communism
216    Comparative Environmental Politics
229    Arab-Israeli Conflict
256    Russian Politics
257    Comparative Courts and Law
281    Capstone Seminar: Civil Wars in Comparative Perspective
286    Capstone Seminar: Advanced Topics in Comparative Politics
290    Capstone Seminar: U.S.-Latin-American Relations
295    Capstone Seminar: Globalization and Democracy
III. INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

International Relations (IR) is the study of nation-states and their interactions with other states. More than just the study of state-to-state relations, IR examines the role that non-state actors, such as intergovernmental organizations, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), multinational corporations (MNCs), and individuals, play in global politics. Human rights, social movements, development, women’s rights, the environment, terrorism, weapons of mass destruction, and economics are among the many topics encompassed in the study of international relations. To explain these complex phenomena students engage in rigorous investigations of competing theoretical and analytical traditions. By exploring diverse intellectual approaches to ongoing problems of world order and stability it becomes possible to make sense of the day-to-day politics comprising global affairs.

The survey course, PSCI 069, Introduction to International Relations, provides you with an overview of the field and the diversity of the discipline (security, economic, and social/cultural issues). In it you learn that the precise domain studied depends on the dynamics of the particular issues involved, such as boundary disputes between states, the economic integration of Europe, poverty, the greenhouse effect, and militarization. You will also find that there are interactions that cross the state-to-state, regional and global domains.

The Political Science Department offers the following International Relations courses: (See the Clark catalogue for full descriptions.)

010  Difficult Dialogues: Israel, Palestine and the U.S.
069  Introduction to International Relations
079  Model United Nations I
080  Model United Nations II
092  First-year Seminar: Women and War
093  First-year Seminar: International Human Rights
095  First-year Seminar: Transnationalism
096  First-year Seminar: Just and Unjust Wars
106  Introduction to Ethnic Studies from an IR Perspective
146  The U.N. and International Law
147  World Order and Globalization
169  Comparative Foreign Policy
180  International Organizations
182  International Security (formerly 280)
190  Political Economy of South Asia
192  Asian Political Economy
193  International Relations of Asia
211  International Cooperation
226  International Political Economy
229  Arab-Israeli Conflict
238  U.S. Foreign Policy
240  Human Rights and International Politics
243  Politics of the European Union
Hist 245 U.S. and Mideast Since 1945
250  U.S. National Security
263  U.N. and Peacekeeping
266  International Law
267  International Negotiations
268  Peace & War
270  Gender, War, and Peace
285  Capstone Seminar: Special Topics in Peace Studies
Hist 286 Vietnam War
289  Capstone Seminar: Advanced Topics in International Relations
297  Senior Honors Thesis
298  Internship
299  Independent Study (Directed Readings or Research)
GRADING FOR THE MAJOR

1. The lowest acceptable grade for all Political Science major courses (including the two taken outside Political Science) is a C-. Exception: You may count one course in which you have received a D or D+.

2. Pass/No Record (P/NR)

Generally, you should NOT take your Political Science major courses using the Pass/No Record option. However, with the approval of your faculty advisor, you may take one major course for P/NR. You may also take a for-credit Internship on a CR/NC basis, since this is the policy of the University. Note: If you want to take an Internship for a letter grade, you can submit a petition to the Dean of the College for approval.

COPACE COURSES

Generally, only one COPACE course may be used to fulfill one of your 13 Political Science major course requirements. However, with the approval of your faculty advisor, you may take more than one COPACE course to satisfy requirements for the major.

HOW TO DECLARE YOUR MAJOR

Once you have chosen Political Science as your major, you should:

1. Obtain a Majors Declaration Form from the Student Records Office or from the Political Science Department Office. The form is available online at: http://www.clarku.edu/offices/registrar/forms/declaration-form.pdf

2. Decide which subfield you want to make your specialization i.e., American Politics and Public Policy, Comparative Politics, or International Relations.

3. Ask a Political Science Department faculty member who teaches courses in that subfield to be your faculty advisor. Your advisor will sign your Major Declaration form and will help you choose courses each semester that are of interest to you and fulfill requirements for the major. In the spring of your junior year, your advisor will sign your Senior Clearance Form, which certifies for the Student Records Office that you have completed, or are in the process of completing, all the requirements for the Political Science major.

INTERDISCIPLINARY CONCENTRATIONS
Clark offers a number of interdisciplinary concentrations that can be taken in addition to your major. (See the Clark catalogue for descriptions of all the concentrations that are offered.) Some concentrations complement the Political Science major especially well, for example, Law and Society, Women’s and Gender Studies, Urban Development and Social Change, Latin American and Latino Studies, and Race and Ethnic Relations. Certain concentration requirements may also fulfill Political Science major requirements. Generally only two courses taken for a concentration can also count for the Political Science major, but under certain circumstances an additional course may count. Check with your faculty advisor about the rules for double-counting courses.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR INTERNSHIPS, SEMESTER IN WASHINGTON, D.C., AND STUDY ABROAD
Students can earn academic credit for internships they do off-campus as part of their educational program. An internship for credit must be supervised by a carefully selected agency sponsor in conjunction with an appropriate Clark faculty member. Examples of past internship placements in Worcester include: the Mayor’s Office, City Councilors’ Offices, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Main South Community Development Corporation, the Central Massachusetts Housing Alliance, the Office of the Public Defender, and various law firms. Examples of internship placements Clark students have had in other locations include the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, the U.S. Department of State, the Office of U.S. Congressman Jim McGovern, and CNN and ABC News in Washington, D.C. If you would like to pursue an internship, you should discuss options with your faculty advisor or with a staff member in the Office of Career Services.
Clark also offers students the opportunity to spend a semester in Washington, D.C., either in a program at American University or at the Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars. Information about these programs can be obtained from Professor Mark Miller or from Clark’s Study Abroad/Study Away Office.

Clark students can study abroad in a wide range of countries, including, for example, the UK, France, Spain, the Netherlands, China, Japan, Chile, Namibia, and Australia. Information about all the programs available can be obtained at Clark’s Study Abroad/Study Away Office. If you plan to participate in a Study Abroad program, be sure to confer with your faculty advisor to find out whether you will be able to fulfill requirements for the Political Science major (or minor) with courses that are part of the program you’re most interested in pursuing.

HONORS IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

Juniors with a strong academic record (a 3.5 g.p.a in their Political Science major courses) may apply to the Honors Program, which expands research and writing skills through an in-depth systematic analysis of a topic of particular interest to the student. You can achieve honors by successfully completing the Honors Program, which involves researching, writing, and defending a senior thesis. Writing a senior honors thesis gives you the opportunity to engage in original research and to work closely with a professor on an individual basis. Honors theses have been written on a wide range of topics. You can see the titles of the honors theses written in the past several years online at: www.clarku.edu/departments/politicalscience/research/index.cfm.

If you are interested in doing a senior honors thesis, you should obtain a copy of the Political Science Department’s Guidelines for the Honors Program, which is available in the Department Office and online at: www.clarku.edu/departments/politicalscience/pdfs/HonorsGuidelines.pdf. You should then contact your advisor, no later than the Fall semester of your junior year, to discuss with him or her whether you have the academic background and skills necessary to complete the program. If you decide to pursue honors in Political Science, you should complete the following steps during your last three semesters at Clark:

1. Find a thesis advisor. During the spring semester of your junior year, you should ask a Political Science faculty member to serve as your thesis advisor and discuss potential research topics with him or her. Choose your thesis advisor carefully because you will be working closely with this faculty member for two to three semesters.

2. Select a topic. Many senior honors thesis topics grow out of course or seminar papers written during a student’s junior year. Others grow out of topics covered in course work that a student would like to pursue further. In any case, you should consider a broad range of topics before selecting one. Your thesis advisor will give you some guidance in narrowing your interests and in identifying suitable methodologies and sources.

3. Submit an application to the Political Science Department Honors Committee by April 1st of your junior year.
   This application should consist of:
   - a transcript
   - a 5 to 7 page proposal
   - a letter of recommendation from your thesis advisor

In writing the proposal, you should refer to the Political Science Department’s Honors Program Guidelines and seek help from your thesis advisor and the Writing Center. The Guidelines contain specific requirements for the content of the proposal. The recommendation (which the thesis advisor should send directly to the Honors Committee) should assess the student’s demonstrated abilities and potential for undertaking successful thesis research as well as the merits of the research proposal. The Honors Committee will let students know whether their applications have been approved or denied by April 10th. In some cases, the Committee might suggest that an applicant revise the proposal and re-submit it.
4. Register for Political Science 297. If you are accepted into the Honors Program, you should register for Senior Honors Thesis (PSCI 297) during the Fall and Spring semesters of your senior year. This counts for one (1.00) credit each semester for a total of two (2.00) credits. You will receive a grade of IP (“in progress”) for the Fall semester and will receive letter grades for both semesters in May of your senior year. During the Fall semester, most of the research should be completed, with periodic reviews of data sources and bibliographic materials by your thesis advisor. During this semester, you are also required to participate in the Honors Thesis Colloquium which consists of all students writing honors theses in a particular year. The purpose of the colloquium, which is run by the chair of the Honors Committee, is to provide you with the intellectual support and feedback of your fellow students. Each student must present a draft of his or her first chapter for written and oral comment by colloquium members. By December 1, a revised draft chapter and a detailed outline of the entire thesis must be submitted to your advisor. During the Spring semester, you should present chapters or sections of your thesis to your advisor according to a schedule worked out between you and your advisor. By March 11, a first draft of your entire thesis must be completed and submitted to your advisor. You are expected to act upon the recommendations of your advisor regarding revisions or additional research for your thesis.

5. Oral defense of the thesis. A final draft of the thesis must be completed by April 1st. Once the thesis has been reviewed and approved by your advisor, it is submitted to the Thesis Committee. This committee is composed of three members: the thesis advisor, one other member of the Political Science Department, and a third member either from the Political Science Department or from a department that is particularly relevant to your thesis topic. The committee may grant honors/high, honors/highest honors or may decide not to award honors. Students who are accepted into the Honors Program but whose work does not ultimately meet the criteria for an Honors designation will still be eligible for credit either for a semester of Independent Study or for a senior thesis without honors, depending upon the level of progress. There are also special junctures at which the student may elect to withdraw from the program during the senior year.

6. Resources available. The Political Science Department makes resources from our Harrington Fund for Public Affairs available to students whose thesis proposals are approved by the Thesis Committee. Up to $500.00 of support may be provided for your research and thesis preparation expenses. To apply, you must submit a brief cover letter requesting support. You must agree to either hold your thesis defense as an open, public event to which fellow students, friends, and other faculty will be invited, or to give a talk or present a poster about your thesis research at Academic Spree Day.

OTHER HONORS, AWARDS, AND PRIZES FOR STUDENTS

PI SIGMA ALPHA NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Outstanding seniors majoring in Political Science may be invited to join Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society. Eligibility is based on a combination of overall grade point average and the grades earned in courses in the Political Science major. There is no application process. Eligible students will receive an invitation to join the Clark chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha from the Chair of the Political Science Department soon after the start of the Spring Semester.

HARRINGTON PUBLIC AFFAIRS FELLOWSHIPS

The Harrington Public Affairs Fellowships are designed to encourage and support undergraduates to pursue original research on politics and public policy as well as community service projects. The fellowships were made possible by a generous gift to our department from Francis A. Harrington in 1963. In addition to supporting these fellowships, the Harrington Fund enables us to offer special lectures, seminars, field trips, and other programs on public affairs each year.

Approximately five Harrington Fellowships ranging from $500-$2500 are awarded to Political Science majors each year. There are two rounds of applications: Fall and Spring. A student who is granted a Harrington Fellowship in the Fall application round can use the Fellowship over the Winter Break and/or during the following Spring semester. A student who is granted a Harrington Fellowship in the Spring application round can use the Fellowship during the following Summer and/or in the Fall semester. The Harrington Fellows share highlights of their projects with the wider Clark community by participating in Fall Fest or Academic Spree Day.

Applications for fellowships to support Spring Semester projects are due by noon on November 15th. Applications for Fellowships to support Summer or Fall Semester projects are due by noon on March 15th. Applications are available in the Political Science Department office, Jeff 302, and can also be downloaded from our department’s website.

THE IRVING AND EDITH WILNER PRIZE
This prize is awarded annually to the student who has written the best research paper for a course in the American Politics subfield during the academic year.

THE SALLIE R. HOLTHAUSEN PRIZE FOR EXCELLENCE IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS
This prize is awarded each year to the top graduating senior Political Science major whose subfield specialization is International Relations.

THE MORRIS H. COHEN PRIZE
This award was established to honor Professor Morris H. Cohen, who joined the Clark faculty in the 1940’s and became one of the founders of our department. The Cohen Prize is awarded annually to the outstanding Political Science major entering his/her senior year whose subfield specialization is American Politics and Public Policy.

THE ZENOVIA SOCHOR MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP
This annual award was established by alumni, friends, and colleagues of Zenovia Sochor to honor her memory. Professor Sochor taught in our department for almost two decades before her untimely death in 1998. The scholarship provides funds to help a Political Science major or minor who is studying abroad on a Clark Program pay for some of the expenses involved in studying abroad. Information about the application and selection criteria for this scholarship can be obtained from the Political Science Department Office or the Study Abroad Office.
POLITICAL SCIENCE GRADUATE SCHOOL ADVICE
Students interested in attending graduate school in political science or related fields should seek advice from their faculty advisor as early on as possible. If you’re thinking about going to graduate school, you should also contact the schools you’re interested in attending to find out which undergraduate courses they recommend or require as prerequisites for their program. Some graduate programs in International Relations, for example, require two years of Economics and proficiency in a foreign language for admission; others require undergraduate courses in statistics and/or other quantitative methods.
POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT FACULTY

ROBERT G. BOATRIGHT, PH.D., Associate Professor of Political Science

Professor Boatright teaches courses on American political behavior, political parties, campaigns and elections, interest groups, political participation, and political theory. His book, Interest Groups and Campaign Finance Reform in the United States and Canada, was published in 2011. He is currently completing work on a book entitled Getting Primaried: The Changing Politics of Congressional Primary Challenges, to be published in the spring of 2013.

MICHAEL J. BUTLER, PH.D., Associate Professor of Political Science
B.A., University of Connecticut, 1994; M.P.M., Public Policy, University of Maryland, 1996; Ph.D., Political Science, University of Connecticut, 2004

Professor Butler teaches a variety of international relations courses on subjects including peace and war, U.S. and comparative foreign policy, transnationalism, military intervention, global terrorism, and the European Union. His research focuses on conflict and cooperation, U.S. and European foreign policy, and global governance. He is the author of the books Selling a Just War: Framing, Legitimacy, and U.S. Military Intervention (2012) and International Conflict Management (2009), as well as numerous articles appearing in peer-reviewed journals such as International Studies Quarterly, International Negotiation, the Journal of Conflict Resolution, International Studies Review, and International Studies Perspectives, among others.

SHARON PERLMAN KREFETZ, PH.D., Andrea B. and Peter D. Klein ’64 Distinguished Professor
A.B., Douglass College (Rutgers University), 1967; M.A., Brandeis University, 1970; Ph.D., Brandeis University, 1975.

Professor Krefetz teaches courses on urban and suburban politics and policies, housing policy, women and politics, and research methods. She is the author of a book on Welfare Policy-Making and City Politics and articles on citizen participation, urban revitalization, and the politics of efforts to get affordable housing built in the suburbs. Much of her research has focused on the impact of state legislative efforts to overcome exclusionary zoning and “open up the suburbs” in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and Illinois. Professor Krefetz spent the Spring 2012 semester on sabbatical as a Visiting Scholar in the Public Policy Department at Tel Aviv University, where she did research on recent housing affordability problems and policies in Israel. She spent previous sabbaticals as a Visiting Fellow at Harvard University’s Joint Center for Housing Studies; as a Visiting Scholar at Brown University’s Taubman Center for Public Policy and American Institutions; and as a Visiting Scholar at the MIT Center for Real Estate’s Housing Affordability Initiative. Professor Krefetz also served as Dean of the College and Associate Provost at Clark from 1992-2000.

MARK C. MILLER, J.D., PH.D., Professor of Political Science
*B.A., Ohio Northern University, 1980; J.D., George Washington University, 1983;
M.A., Ohio State University, 1989; Ph.D., Ohio State University, 1990.*

Professor Miller teaches courses on U.S. constitutional law, U.S. judicial politics, comparative courts and law, the U.S. Congress, and lawyers and American politics. His current research interests include the interactions between Congress and the courts; constitutional law issues involving the powers of Congress; and comparisons of judicial politics in North America and Western Europe. In 1995 he served as a Congressional Fellow, and during the 1999-2000 academic year he was a Judicial Fellow at the Supreme Court of the United States. He also serves as chair of Clark’s pre-law advisory committee. In Spring semester 2008, Professor Miller held the Thomas Jefferson Distinguished Fulbright Chair in the American Studies Program at Leiden University in the Netherlands. His latest book, The View of the Courts from the Hill: Interactions between Congress and the Federal Judiciary, was published in 2009. His latest book project is Judicial Politics in the United States.
PAUL W. POSNER, PH.D., Associate Professor of Political Science

Professor Posner teaches courses on Latin-American politics, US-Latin American relations, democratic theory, and comparative environmental politics. His research interests include democratization and popular participation in developing countries, especially in Latin America; economic and state restructuring in Latin America and its impact on social organization and political participation; comparative public policy, particularly with respect to environmental regulation, labor policy, and social welfare reform; and the impact of globalization and the spread of neoliberal economics on domestic policy formation and implementation. While Chile has been the main focus of his research in Latin America, in recent years he has expanded his research to include Mexico, Argentina, and Venezuela. Professor Posner is the author of a recently-published book, State, Market, and Democracy in Chile: The Constraint of Popular Participation.

SRINIVISAN SITARAMAN, PH.D., Associate Professor of Political Science
B.A., University of Madras, Chennai, India, 1987; M.A., University of Madras, Chennai, India, 1989; M.A., Ohio University, 1993; Ph.D. University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 2003.

Professor Sitaraman teaches courses on International Relations, International Political Economy, International Organizations and Law, Human Rights, Asian Politics, directs the Model UN Program, and he is affiliated with the Fairbank Center for East Asian Studies at Harvard University. Sitaraman teaches courses on United Nations and International Law, Human Rights, Asian Politics, International Political Economy, and International Relations. His book released in the summer of 2009 dealt with the issue of state participation and resistance towards international treaty regimes. He has also published several articles and monographs on Environmental and Security Regimes and on South Asian Regional Security and Nonproliferation issues. Presently, he is working on two book projects—one on international intervention in failed and failing states and the other one on South Asian International Relations, particularly those involving China, India, and Pakistan.
VALERIE SPERLING, PH.D., Professor of Political Science
B.A., Yale University, 1987; M.A. Georgetown University, Russian Area Studies Program, 1991; Ph.D., University of California, Berkeley, 1997.

Professor Sperling teaches a variety of courses in comparative politics, including Russian politics; revolution and political violence; mass murder and genocide under communism; transitions to democracy; globalization and democracy; and introduction to women's studies. Her research interests include globalization and accountability, social movements, gender politics, patriotism and militarism, and state-building in the post-communist region. She is the author of Organizing Women in Contemporary Russia: Engendering Transition (1999), about the emergence and development of the Russian women’s movement. Her newest book, Altered States: The Globalization of Accountability, was published in 2009. Professor Sperling is on Sabbatical for the 2012 – 2013 academic year.

ORA B. SZEKELY, PH.D., Assistant Professor of Political Science.
B.A. Cornell University, 1999; M.A. University of Chicago, 2004; Ph.D. McGill University, 2011.

Professor Szekely teaches courses on comparative politics, including Introduction to Comparative Politics and the Politics of the Middle East. Her research focuses on the foreign and domestic policy choices of nonstate military actors in the developing world, particularly in the Middle East. Her doctoral dissertation was entitled “Send Lawyers, Guns, and Money: The Politics of Militia Survival in the Middle East.” She conducted the field research for her dissertation in Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, Israel, and the Palestinian Territories.

KRISTEN P. WILLIAMS, PH.D, Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science
B.A., University of California, Los Angeles, 1986; M.A., California State University, Long Beach, 1990; M.A. University of California, Los Angeles, 1992; Ph.D., University of California, Los Angeles, 1998.

Professor Williams teaches courses on international relations, including introduction to international relations; U.S. foreign policy; nationalism, ethnic conflict and international security; U.S. national security; peace and war; gender, war and peace;

Emeritus:
JOHN C. BLYDENBURGH, PH.D.

Research Professor:
CYNTHIA H. ENLOE, PH.D.

Adjunct Faculty:
DOUGLAS J. LITTLE, PH.D.
ROBERT J.S. ROSS, PH.D.
POLITICAL SCIENCE MAJOR WORKSHEET

Subfield __________________________________________________________________________

SUBFIELD REQUIREMENTS

One subfield introductory course (PSCI 050 – Introduction to American Government; or PSCI 069 – Introduction to International Relations; or PSCI 070 – Introduction to Comparative Politics):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. __________________________*</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Three additional Political Science department courses in your chosen subfield: (One of these MUST be at the 200 level):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2. __________________________</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. __________________________</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. __________________________</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

One junior/senior Capstone Seminar in your chosen subfield (must be at 200 level):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5. __________________________</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note: The corresponding subfield introductory course (PSCI 050, PSCI 069 and PSCI 070) and PSCI 107 are prerequisites for subfield junior/senior Capstone Seminars. In certain cases, exceptions may be made with permission from the instructor.

One History course related to your subfield

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>6. __________________________</td>
<td>____________</td>
<td>______________</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

One introductory course outside your subfield specialization (PSCI 050 – Introduction to American Government, PSCI 069 – Introduction to International Relations or PSCI 070 – Introduction to Comparative Politics):

7. _____________________________*      _______________      _______________

PSCI 107 Research Methods in Politics:

8.  PSCI 107___________________     _______________     ________________

One course in normative political theory (e.g., PSCI 155, PSCI 203, PSCI 206, PSCI 260, or PSCI 265):

9. _____________________________       _______________ _______________

Economics 010 (or Economics 100):

10. _____________________________*      _______________     ________________

Three Political Science Department courses from outside your subfield:
(One of these MUST be at the 200 level and one MUST be in the 3rd subfield—either the Introduction to that subfield or any other course in that subfield.)

11. _____________________________     _______________     ________________

12. _____________________________     _______________     ________________

13. _____________________________     _______________     ________________

* Students are strongly encouraged to take these courses in their first or second year.
 Research Methods should be taken in the sophomore year. It is a prerequisite for the subfield junior/senior Capstone Seminars.
UNIVERSITY REQUIREMENTS FOR GRADUATION (32 CREDITS TOTAL)

Program of Liberal Studies courses:
Critical Thinking: _______FA _______VE Perspectives: _______AP
_______GCP _______HP _______LCP _______SP _______VP

The six Perspective courses must come from six different departments.

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE MINOR

The Political Science minor requires a minimum of six courses within the department. One must be an introductory course (PSCI 050, 069, or 070); one must be either in political theory (PSCI 155, 203, 206, 260 or 265) or research methods (PSCI 107); and four others can be in any combination of subfield areas. Two of these courses must be at the 200 level. An internship supervised by a Political Science faculty member and approved political science courses taken as part of a Study Abroad program may count toward the minor.

POLITICAL SCIENCE MINOR WORKSHEET

Introductory Course: (PSCI 050, PSCI 069 OR PSCI 070)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Political Theory (PSCI 155, PSCI 203, PSCI 206, PSCI 260 or PSCI 265)

OR Research Methods (PSCI 107)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course</th>
<th>Semester</th>
<th>Dept. Waiver</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Four Additional Courses (including two at the 200 level.)

3. ____________________________      _______________      ________________

4. ____________________________      _______________      ________________

5. ____________________________      _______________      ________________

6. ____________________________      _______________      ________________

NOTES