October 10, 2010

A Message to the Economic Geography Community, Readers, and Subscribers

Economic Geography welcomes Professor Andrés Rodríguez-Pose as a New Editor.

We are pleased to announce that Professor Andrés Rodríguez-Pose (LSE) is joining the editorial team. As an accomplished economic geographer, Andrés combines quantitative and qualitative methods, and along with editorial experience, reinforces our position in Britain and Continental Europe. Andrés will boost the combined expertise of our current editorial team, comprised of Yuko Aoyama (Clark), David Rigby (UCLA), Henry Yeung (National University of Singapore), and Jim Murphy (Clark) as a book review editor. Please join us in welcoming Andrés as a new editor. For more information about Professor Rodriguez-Pose, please see http://www.clarku.edu/econgeography/editors.cfm.

We also would like to take this opportunity to thank Professor Gernot Grabher as he completes his term as an editor in December, 2010. Continental Europe has grown in significance as an important source of submissions as well as market, and we owe a great deal to Gernot’s stewardship in the past four years for solidifying our strength in the region. We wish him the best of luck as he focuses on program building at the Department of Urban and Regional Economic Studies, HCU Hamburg, and we look forward to his continued contribution as an editorial board member.

~ Yuko Aoyama, Editor-in-chief, Economic Geography, Clark University