TWENTIETH
ANNIVERSARY

1909
The Second Decennial Celebration of the Opening of Clark University

THE DEPARTMENT OF PSYCHOLOGY

With the close of the present academic year Clark University will have completed its second decade of service. To celebrate this event and to emphasize again the ideal of scientific research to which the University has from the first been devoted, a number of distinguished and productive men of science, at home and in Europe, have been invited to lecture at the University during the week of September 6-11. In conjunction with these lectures, it is also planned to hold a series of conferences upon the teaching of different branches of science, especially of those represented on the Clark staff. In these conferences we are assured of the co-operation of many of our colleagues in other institutions who are qualified to speak with especial authority on the questions that will be under discussion.

Lecturers who come as Guests of the Department of Experimental and Comparative Psychology

Professor L. William Stern of the University of Breslau, Managing Director of the Institute of Applied Psychology in Berlin, Editor of Beiträge zur Psychologie der Aussage (1903-1904), joint editor, with Dr. Lipmann, of the Zeitschrift für angewandte Psychologie und psychologische Sammeltransaktion; and with Clara Stern, of the Monographien über die seelische Entwicklung des Kindes, a pioneer in the study of Individual Psychology and the Psychology of Testimony. Professor Stern will deliver three, or possibly four, lectures on topics lying in the new fields which he has cultivated with such marked success.

Our American guests need no introduction to American psychologists. They are:

Professor E. B. Titchener of Cornell University,
Professor Franz Boas of Columbia University, Professor H. S. Jennings of Johns Hopkins University, and
Dr. Adolf Meyer of the New York Pathological Institute, Professor (elect) of Psychiatry in the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

Each of these gentlemen has promised a single lecture, except Professor Titchener, who will give two.

Psychological Conferences

Of the Psychological Conferences two will consider the teaching of psychology as a professional subject in schools for the training of teachers, i.e., in normal schools and colleges. The conference dealing with the subject in normal schools will be under the chairmanship of Professor Guy M. Whipple of Cornell University, and that on the more advanced training under the chairmanship of Professor Carl E. Seashore of the University of Iowa. Conferences on the teaching of psychology in other professional schools may also be organized.

An afternoon session will be given to the demonstration of new apparatus and the discussion of questions of laboratory equipment and management. At this time Professor Arthur G. Webster, of the Department of Physics, Clark University, will demonstrate his method and apparatus for the absolute measurement of the intensity of tones.

It is intended that there shall also be ample opportunity for informal and individual conference among the psychologists present, and it is hoped that not a little interchange of ideas and experience in matters of research, as well as of pedagogy, may be possible.

Aid in securing lodgings for the time of the Celebration will be gladly furnished by the University Office (address Miss Florence Chandler, Bursar, Clark University, Worcester, Mass.).

It is hoped that College "commons" will be available at the time of the Celebration for those attending it, but this will in some measure depend on the number of persons likely to make use of them. An early indication of intention to attend the celebration will therefore be of assistance to those having this side of the matter in charge.

In Psychiatry a series of lectures will be given by Dr. Sigmund Freud. Subjects to be announced later.

DEPARTMENT OF PEDAGOGY AND SCHOOL HYGIENE

The Department of Pedagogy and School Hygiene has planned for the following lectures and conferences:

Three lectures on School Hygiene and the Hygiene of Instruction by Dr. Leo Burgerstein, k. k. Professor, Privatdozent in the k. k. Universität, Regierungsrat, Vienna, Austria.

Dr. Burgerstein is the leading European authority on School Hygiene, co-author of Burgerstein and Nctolitzky's Handbuch der Schulhygiene, which forms Part I of Vol. 7 of Weyl's Handbuch der Hygiene, member of the permanent international committee of the International Congress of School Hygiene, and a frequent contributor to the literature of this subject.

Dr. C. G. Jung, Privatdozent in Psychiatry in the University of Zürich, Switzerland, will give three lectures on Mental Hygiene or related topics. Dr. Jung is the well-known specialist in the study of Association Processes and in the method of Assoziation-Diagnostik. He is also editor of the Jahrbuch für Psychoanalytische und Psychopathologische Forschungen.
Conferences

It is planned, also, to hold a series of conferences—two in School Hygiene and two in Pedagogy. In each of these subjects it is proposed to consider especially two topics: the opportunity and need of research, and the place of the subject in courses for the training of teachers. The opportunity and need for research in each of these fields is obvious, but will be made more emphatic by illustration. The place of these subjects in courses for teachers needs special consideration. As regards Pedagogy many feel that our courses should be radically reconstructed in the light of modern Psychology and Experimental Pedagogy and modern studies in History and Sociology. As regards School Hygiene, not to mention its vital importance, it seems strange that the one subject connected with Pedagogy which for many years has received the attention of scientific students and where a solid nucleus of scientific fact has been collected should be omitted from the training courses for teachers or taught as a subsidiary to School Organization, Psychology, or the like. It is hoped that different points of view will be presented at these conferences, and the cooperation of a number of workers in this field has been promised.

The conference on the Opportunity and Need for Scientific Research in Education will be under the chairmanship of Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, U. S. Commissioner of Education. Among those who will discuss the subject are: Dr. W. C. Bagley, Professor of Education, University of Illinois; Prof. Paul H. Ilam, Professor of the History and Art of Teaching, Harvard University; Prof. Paul Monroe, Professor of the History of Education in the Teachers College, Columbia University.

The conference on Education as a College Subject will also be under the chairmanship of Dr. Brown. Among those who will discuss the subject are: Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, Dean of the School of Pedagogy, New York University; Dr. Edward Franklin Buchner, Professor of Education, Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Anna J. McKeeag, Professor of Pedagogy, Wellesley College; Dr. James E. Russell, Dean of the Teachers College, Columbia University; and Dr. J. R. Street, Dean of the Teachers College, Syracuse University.

A third conference will be devoted to the general subject of School Hygiene, especially the opportunity for research in this field. This will be under the chairmanship of Dr. F. B. Dresslar, of the University of Alabama, and the following among others will contribute to the discussion: Dr. R. C. Cabot, Professor of Clinical Medicine, Harvard University; Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Director of Physical Training, New York City; Dr. Henry H. Goddard, Director of Psychological Research, Training School, Vineland, New Jersey; Dr. Willard S. Small, Principal of the Eastern High School, Washington, D. C.; Dr. H. P. Walcott, Chairman of the Mass. State Board of Health; and Dr. Guy Montrose Whipple, Professor of Education, Cornell University.

Another conference will consider the place and importance of School Hygiene in the curriculum of schools for the training of teachers. In this it is expected that different phases of the subject will be presented by William E. Chancellor, Superintendent of Schools, Norwalk, Conn.; Dr. James Huff McCurdy, International Y. M. C. A., Springfield, Mass.; Dr. E. C. Moore, Superintendent of Schools, Los Angeles, California; Prof. Myron T. Scudder, Professor of Education, Rutgers College; Edward L. Stevens, Associate City Superintendent, New York City; Dr. Thomas A. Storey, Associate Professor of Physical Instruction, College of the City of New York, and others.

The following is a preliminary announcement of the daily program. Dr. Jung and one or two other foreign guests will speak in German. Dr. Burgerstein will speak in English. Unless otherwise stated the meeting will be held in Room 19 of the Main Building of the University.
